

Guild of Food Writers Evening at Number Five at The Devonshire
Club, 5 Devonshire Square, London, EC2M 4YD with
Chef Adam Gray on Tuesday 9 April at 6.30pm

THE GUILD OF FOOD WRITERS

An Evening at Number Five at The Devonshire Club with Chef Adam Gray

Tuesday 9 April, 6.30pm

The Devonshire Club, 5 Devonshire Square, London, EC2M 4YD

A private members' club located, unusually, closer to the East than the West End of London, The Devonshire Club has engaged Chef Adam Gray to deliver seasonal British cuisine that combines the local and historical with a modern slant.

Guild members and guests are invited to join Adam Gray as he discusses recipe creation, looking to the past to produce something fresh but authentic; combined with his love of using British fare and discovering new products.

A drink on arrival will be followed by delicious bowl food from Number Five served throughout the evening, which will include the opportunity to find out more about the Club and its networking facilities.

Chef Adam Gray

Adam was appointed as Executive Chef of the Devonshire Private Members' Club for their restaurant 'Number Five' in January 2018. Adam's past accolades include Michelin star awards and directorship of two cookery schools as well as a stint as private to chef to Earl Spencer at Althorp House. At the Devonshire Club, he has been researching the history of the building, a stone's throw from Liverpool Street and former tobacco, spice and leather goods warehouses, to inspire his menu.